

Energy planners, policy makers, and utilities tend to think in terms of daily or even seasonal demand. Further analysis is needed to relate the individual dish level data presented in this paper to daily demand. Again, this can be done using the cooking diaries studies, which generated data on the number of dishes prepared as part of a given meal, and the number of meals prepared in a day.

References

Batchelor, S., Brown, Scott, N., & Leary, J. (2019). Two birds, one stone - reframing cooking energy policy in Africa and Asia. Energies, 12(9). <https://doi.org/10.3390/en12091591>

IEA. (2019). Africa energy outlook 2019. <https://doi.org/10.1787/g2120ab250-en>

Inston, R., & Scott, N. (2022). Costs of cooking with different fuels : a case study from mini-grids in Tanzania (Issue January).

National Planning Authority. (2020). Third National Development Plan (NDP III) 2020/21-2024/25. In National Planning Authority (Issue January, pp. 1–310). <http://envalert.org/wp-content/uploads/2020/06/NDP-3-Finale.pdf>

National Energy Policy 2019, (2019). <https://doi.org/10.3775/jie.33.455>

Wollee, M. B. (2020). Quantifying Energy Losses in Electric Cooking Stoves. International Journal of Engineering Research and Technology, V9(05), 753–756. <https://doi.org/10.17577/ijertv9is050577>